WHEREAS, students who repeatedly enroll in courses limit access for students who have not yet enrolled in these courses and therefore may delay progress to degree and graduation for those who have not gained access to those same courses, and

WHEREAS, repeated attempts are often indicative of inappropriate major selection and the need for advising intervention, and

WHEREAS, repeated attempts to complete a course may place an additional financial burden on students, and

- Students shall be limited to three attempts at any course.
- Students who enroll for a fourth attempt will be dropped from the course.
- Courses designated as repeatable credit (to the limit allowed) are excluded from the three repeat limit policy
